

New U.S. State Data Protection Laws Enforceable in 2020

The legislative sessions for U.S. states in 2019 produced an unprecedented number of new or updated data protection statutes and regulations. This guide summarizes the essential elements of these new laws. Typical among the regulations were updates to breach notification statutes that included expanded definitions of personal information and requirements for improved administrative and technical controls.

The California legislature passed six different statutes making multiple changes to the California Consumer Privacy Act of 2018 (CCPA). However, the changes were around the edges of the law and the core compliance mandates remain the same for businesses that collect the personal information of California consumers.

Noteworthy among these new laws are (1) New York state's SHIELD Act, which imposes updated breach notification requirements and information security controls and features wide applicability to businesses and individuals nationwide; (2) California's data broker registration statute, the second such statute in the nation; and (3) at least six additional state implementations of the NAIC Insurance Data Security Model Law, which is modeled on New York state's Department of Financial Services Part 500 cybersecurity regulations for financial institutions.
